

Level 5-6

Forgive or forget

Challenge the person

Forget the friendship

Level 5-6

Forgive or forget

Forgive

Not sure

Your best friend flirts with a person they know you have a crush on

You really like a someone in your class and your best friend keeps teasing you about it.

The person you have been dating keeps sending text messages to another someone else in your group.

Your friend wants you to lie to your parents about where you're going. They get angry when you say you won't lie to them.

Forgive or forget

You make plans with your friend to stay over at their place on Saturday night. Your friend rings you on Saturday afternoon to say you can't come over because they've been invited to someone else's house.

Your friend has their first romantic relationship and stops spending time with you. When the relationship ends, they start texting, wanting to see you again.

Forgive or forget

Your best friend tells everyone that you're the first person in class to get your period.

Your friends don't invite you to a sleep over.

Your sibling tells your parents that they saw you at the shopping centre with your friends when you told them you were at the library.

A group of kids, including some of your friends, are whispering together and you think it's about you. You confront your friends, but they say they weren't gossiping, only listening.

Forgive or forget

You walk home with your younger sibling. A new friend joins you, but they want you to ditch your sibling so you can talk about grown up stuff.

A couple of your friends hang out together on the weekend. You don't get invited and only find out when you overhear someone talking about it.

Forgive or forget

Your best friend writes you last on a list of their friends. When you ask them about it, they say it doesn't mean anything.

Some of your friends have been invited into a new group chat. Your best friend joins the group even though they know you haven't been invited.
